N.Y., Michigan artists' works featured at Reyes Projects reception

Reyes Projects, the hot new gallery in Birmingham, had a packed reception for two solo shows Wednesday. Nationally acclaimed art dealer Terese Reyes welcomed about 100 art lovers into her renovated space on Old Woodward Avenue. "This show is indicative of our mission to put internationally and regionally renowned artists in dialogue together, and I'm very proud of it," says Terese. On view at the gallery is New York-based artist CharlesAndresen's work — he's a bit of a local legend in New York, having moonlighted as a security guard at the Metropolitan Museum of Art for 25 years, all while painting and exhibiting on the side. Michigan native Chris Riddell also has work on view at Reyes Projects. Terese says Reyes Projects will host five such exhibitions per year dedicated to emerging and mid-career artists.
